ABOUT THE PROGRAM

Today’s ever-changing economy requires well-trained professionals to plan and manage the activities through which products and services are created and distributed to customers. Clarkson’s online Master of Science in Supply Chain Management is designed to meet this need. It’s an interdisciplinary program for high-performing professionals who have an established track record of success. The program provides integrated learning opportunities for those interested in becoming proficient in effectively managing complex supply chains and prepares them for a wide range of positions, such as purchasing manager, supply manager and director of material management.
